OUR STORY

Our brewery is carved right from the heart of downtown Slippery Rock, occupying one of the earliest structures still in existence on Main Street.

Peter Uber, one of the first settlers in the area, constructed the house and barn in 1805. By the 1835 census, the buildings served as a public tavern and inn. Peter's son, William Uber, served as the barkeep while Peter headed west searching for gold. In 1850 Peter returned, and with his son William and a carpenter tenant named Roy, they added the existing storefront to the front of the original barn. They became furniture and cabinetmakers, which soon led to coffin making and undertaking as Uber and Sons Undertakers and Furniture Dealers.

Bob and Jodi McCafferty purchased the property in 1998. They patiently rebuilt the structure from the foundation up through the roof to return it to its original public house status, with a twist of cabinetmaking along the way. Bob gathered hardwoods from various archaeological sites, and they repurposed on-site building materials back into the building, which displays a green sense of re-use. One can sit down at a booth handcrafted with black walnut and curly maple left from the Uber's furniture store, slip a penny in the crack of an original 1805 beam, or rest a beer out back on the slate bar top which was once used as a walkway to the funeral home.

Tradition and quality are the trademarks of our full menu restaurant and whole grain brewery. Today our craft beer is conditioned in the cellar, which once served as the local morgue. We use traditional brewing methods and the finest ingredients to produce superb, unique brews free of preservatives, additives, or sugars. We deliver the freshest ingredients from our neighbors' farms, living and practicing farm-to-your-fork.

North Country Brewing is famous not only for our hearty, delicious homemade fare and unique handcrafted brews that fuel your body and soul but also for an intimate atmosphere and exceptional entertainment. Whether you are a settler or someone fresh out of the frontier, you have found the tavern to savor the ales, foods, and good times from the Old Island, without the swim.

If the forest is full of hostiles or the Slippery Rock Creek is too high, you will be happy to know that North Country Canning Co. canned provisions are always available on shelves throughout the territory. Many of your favorite brews are available for both your travels and for your favorite lodge.

"Eat well, drink well, and live well."

-Bob & Jodi
