— HISTORIC — HARMONY INN OPEN!

After considerable efforts the renovation of the Inn located in Historic Harmony is complete and now open for business.

One of the earliest licensed establishments in Butler County

Located in the National Historic District in Harmony, Pennsylvania, and originally the residence of Austin Pearce, a prominent banker, mill operator, and railroad executive. The Harmony Inn was Pearce's Italianate-style home in 1856, the home featured black walnut and chestnut woodwork. It is believed the building also had the first indoor plumbing in the area.

Pearce's fortunes plummeted when his PNC&E railroad business failed, causing him to sell his home to a member of the Ziegler family, a descendant of the Mennonites. Ziegler renovated the building into a hotel and a saloon and became one of the earliest licensed establishments in Butler County. At the turn of the century, a two-story wing was added to the original structure.

Known at the time as "The Ziegler Hotel," the Zieglers operated the hotel for many years. After the family sold the hotel, The Harmony Inn went through several owners and was known by several establishment names such as "Manor House" and "Harmony Hilten." Bob and Jodi McCafferty bought the Harmony Inn in March 2013.

Harmony Inn awards prize for favorite pumpkin!

In October Members of the community placed their names and cellular phone numbers on the backs of various carved and decorated pumpkins. Then displayed their works at the Harmony Inn. Prizes were awarded.

Chef finds a place to carve out own niche

Chef demands the Trading Company make supply runs five times a week, no matter how hostile the woods are or how high the Connoquenessing is. However, the McCaffertys still encourage the post to use wild game as much as possible. Both voyageurs from the frontier and settlers alike boast and revel over the sturdy fare, amazed at what they can do with bear grease and dried corn!

Harmony is defined as, "an agreement in feeling, approach, action, disposition, or like." The German immigrants who founded the town of Harmony in 1804 based their dogmas around this definition. Their purchase of five thousand acres from Detmar Basse Mueller eventually became one of the United States' best examples of communal living, known as the Harmony Society.

Haunted Harmony

Innumerable media reports from all over Western Pennsylvania account on the haunting of the Harmony Inn. Several witnesses have reported seeing a little girl in a white dress roaming the upstairs of the Harmony Inn and furniture has been rearranged without human intervention. Guests have also reported feeling a significant warm temperature inflection at certain periods of the day, although it seems to occur more frequently at dusk. Although employees and customers are often frightened by the unexplained images, everyone reports that their encounters have always been friendly.

They Made Excellent Whiskey and Beer.

Harmony is defined as, "an agreement in feeling, approach, action, disposition, or like." The German immigrants who founded the town of Harmony in 1804 based their dogmas around this definition. Their purchase of five thousand acres from Detmar Basse Mueller eventually became one of the United States' best examples of communal living, known as the Harmony Society.

Although the Harmony Society banned tobacco and believed in communal living and celibacy, they made excellent whiskey and beer. However, this would create conflict with the Christian beliefs. In 1814, the Harmony Society sold the town of Harmony to Abraham Ziegler for $100,000. The Harmony society then moved to New Harmony, Indiana and eventually settled at Economy, Pennsylvania. Due to Ziegler's Mennonite beliefs,
Harmony eventually associated with the sect.
